

thled with them in their struggle with Russia. We were presented to the Mikado and to the Crown Princess. The Emperor was sick. The Mikado received us at the palace in a magnificent chamber. He stood at the further end of the room. Each visitor had to bow three times on his way from the entrance to where the Mikado was standing. His hands in American fashion, and told each visitor in English that he was glad to meet him. We were afterwards presented to the Crown Princess, and the Mikado came in and mingled with the visitors.

Mr. Jones described with some detail the magnificent banquet given the Americans at the Imperial Palace. The Mikado was present, of course, and, somewhat democratically, ate at the same table with several of the Americans, including Mr. Jones.

No War Results.

"I did not see the slightest evidence of the ravages of war in Japan," said Mr. Jones; "not an empty sleeve or tattered leg, no sign of the stress of war or the resulting pinch of poverty. In one town we saw a body of about three hundred Russian prisoners marching along the street, escorted by Japanese soldiers. The Russians cheered us when they saw us. We were white men, and they were tired of looking at nothing but yellow. We were the salute of the poor fellows with right good will. But it was surprising to see that the Japanese paid not the slightest attention to the prisoners. The pedestrians on the street, the shopkeepers, the farmers, seemed to see much more than the direction of the prisoners. It was a fine manifestation of good manners and good breeding."

Mr. Jones is enthusiastic regarding Japan, the people, and especially the country.

Every Inch Cultivated.

"Is it well farmed?" I asked. "Well farmed?" he replied, repeating my question. "Every foot of it is like a garden. Not an inch of space, outside that occupied by the roads and the buildings, is allowed to go uncultivated. The fields are cultivated to the foot to the very top, the land being terraced in order to afford cultivation. Rice, rice, everywhere. That is the staple crop. I did not see a dozen cows in the country. I said more than once that when I got back to the United States the first thing I would do would be to drink a half gallon of good milk, and when I reached San Francisco I kept my word."

"I have written for the most remarkable city we visited," said Mr. Jones, "though we did not see as much of it as we did of some others, owing to the intense feeling against Americans there, which manifested itself in the recent boycott of American goods. There were threats made before our arrival, but none of them were carried out."

Insult Miss Roosevelt.

"The walls of the city in many places bore placards representing Miss Alice Roosevelt in a pinnace which was being borne by turtles. According to the Chinese idea, the turtle is the lowest form of animal, the intention being to insult the daughter of the President. Some of the visitors went through the city shopping, and were not molested. The streets of Canton are probably the narrowest in the world. At any point it is possible to stand in the middle of the street and touch the walls of the houses on either hand, and they are tall houses for the most part. There are three millions of people in the city limits. I was told, and they are crowded together like bees in a hive. A million of the inhabitants live in huts on the river banks."

"I have written of only a few of the interesting things of which Mr. Jones talked. Some day, probably, he will give to the readers of The Times-Dispatch his own account of his trip to the Orient. He was a great deal, and it is more than likely that he got ideas from his observations that will attract attention when he resumes his congressional duties this winter. He started on the trip with a great deal of alleged information regarding the Philippines. His trip has proven much of it to be correct. He also found, doubtless, that much of it was otherwise. He is the senior Democratic member of the Committee on Insular Affairs, which has to do with all legislation concerning the Philippines. "There is not enough sugar raised in the Philippines to render it likely there will ever be serious competition with American sugar," said Mr. Jones, "nor do I think the tobacco grown in the Archipelago will ever compete with the tobacco grown here." There was significance in both sentences.

HE WILL BE SAFE IN NEW ORLEANS

(Continued from First Page.)

New Orleans people that he should remain over night in the city, and be the guest of honor at an elaborate banquet, but the probability is that he will sail for Washington on the evening of the 26th.

Joseph O. Thompson, collector of internal revenue at Birmingham, Ala., also called on President Roosevelt, but a committee representing the commercial bodies of Birmingham to arrange finally the details of the President's visit to their city on the 24th instant. The President will spend two hours at Birmingham, arriving at 6:30 P. M. In that time the President will deliver two addresses, one at the State Fair and the other in the city. The committee said it would be necessary on account of the President's limited stay in the city, for the citizens of Birmingham to arrange for a great demonstration, which had been arranged in a tentative way.

North Carolina Stops.

Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, conferred with the President regarding his trip through that State. He urged the President to make a longer stop at Raleigh than has been scheduled, and to make some other stops in the State. In addition to these arrangements, the President said that he could not vary from the programme now laid down. The President's speech at Raleigh will be one of the most important on the trip. The President will make his trip through the High Point Green-shore and Charlotte in North Carolina.

Use Armored Cruiser.

The armed cruiser Pennsylvania has been tentatively selected to convey President Roosevelt from New Orleans to Norfolk on the return from his Southern trip. Rear Admiral Brownson, commanding the armored cruiser division of the North Atlantic fleet, was at McLean, of the Pennsylvania, were at the Navy Department today, and conferred with the officials regarding the arrangements for the voyage. From Norfolk the President will be conveyed to Washington by the Mayflower. Captain Winslow has arrived here from Newport, and was at the Navy Department today.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE

Cures Headache caused by summer heat, overwork, nervous disorders or impaired digestion. Relieves quickly.

"Berry's for Clothes."

Every man knows wool is up, and there has been a great deal of woolen goods in the market. As we've said before, you've got to trust your clothes about that. YOU won't be able to tell until you get to wearing the suit or overcoat. We know the cloth that's in our garments, and we guarantee them all, as usual. Best work, perfect fit and good style—all thrown in. Suits, $10 to $30. Top Coats, $12.50 to $30.

Same high-grade Shoes, Hats, Shirts, Neckwear and Underwear, too, for boys as well as men.

BISHOP VAN DE VYVER TO RESIGN

(Continued from First Page.)

likely, had he resigned or even contemplated such a step.

Beyond this careful statement the vicar-general could not go. It is recalled, however, that at the time of the death of Monsignor Chapelle, Bishop Van de Vyver, chiefly for the reasons pointed out in the Baltimore dispatch, was at once mentioned as his possible successor. This, however, was then and appears to be even now mere speculation.

One thing that, notwithstanding the strong reasons given by Father Bowler for discrediting the report, inspires credence in it is the fact of its publication in the Baltimore dispatch, which is closely associated with the Roman Catholic hierarchy in America, and which, so far as it is likely that a secular paper should occupy this position, is a semi-official organ of the church.

Is Much Beloved.

The report cannot be received, but with dismay throughout the diocese, and, if it proves true, will arouse the most widespread and profound sorrow. The bishop returned from Rome only a few days ago, after a long absence, and received a cordial and loving greeting from the Catholics of the city. The possibility of losing him again, and this time without prospect of his return at any future date, would prove inexpressibly painful to his people.

Bishop Van de Vyver's administration of the diocese has been notably successful. He crowned his work here by securing for his city, through the assistance of Mr. Thomas P. Ryan, of New York, the magnificent cathedral, which, when complete, will be perhaps the finest structure in the entire South.

The bishop is a native of Belgium. He studied theology at the American College, Louvain, Belgium, was ordained priest in 1870, came to Virginia the same year; was stationed at the Cathedral for several years, transferred to Harper's Ferry, W. Va., in May, 1876, and recalled to Richmond and made vicar-general May 1, 1881. He was consecrated bishop of this diocese, embracing the northeastern part of West Virginia, and all of Virginia east of the Blue Ridge October 20, 1889.

Followed Notable Men.

Bishop Van de Vyver followed a line of notable men, whose work he has ably taken up and carried on. The bishops of Richmond leading up to his administration were as follows:

Right Rev. Patrick Kelly, D. D., first bishop, consecrated in 1821; translated to Waterford and Lismore in 1822; died October 8, 1829.
Right Rev. Richard V. Whelan, second bishop, consecrated March 21, 1841; translated to Wheeling July 23, 1850; died in 1874.
Right Rev. John McGill, D. D., third bishop, consecrated November 10, 1850; died January 14, 1872.
Right Rev. James Gibbons, D. D., fourth bishop, consecrated August 10, 1868. Bishop of Adirondack and vicar-apostolic of New York, translated to the See of Richmond July 30, 1872; translated to the See of Baltimore October 3, 1877.
Right Rev. John J. Kenne, D. D., fifth bishop, consecrated August 25, 1878, made titular bishop of Akko, and rector of the American Catholic University at Washington, D. C., in 1887.

DAUGHTERS ASSEMBLE IN SAN FRANCISCO

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

OAKLAND, CAL., October 4.—The unofficial confederation of yesterday had entirely disappeared to-day among the Daughters of the Confederacy assembled by hundreds at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco. The session was opened by a band with patriotic airs and followed by prayer. Mrs. Smythe, president, made an elegant speech in answer to one of welcome.

A tribute was paid to the founder of the organization, Mrs. C. M. Goodlet. There was unveiled a fine oil portrait of Mrs. Goodlet.

Mrs. Van Wyck, of San Francisco, moved that the portrait of Mrs. Goodlet be sent to the Confederate Memorial Museum at Richmond, Va. It was objected that only pictures of celebrated men had been hung in the museum so far. It was then moved that the portrait be placed in the Solid South room of the museum. The motion was carried unanimously.

Sidewalk Mathematics.

Reverend Party.—If I gave you five pennies and your little brother asked you for two of them, how many would you have?
Enterprising Newsboy.—Five.—Chicago Journal.

CAPTAIN PAT M'CAULL SPEAKING TO AN AUDIENCE, MAINLY OF NEGROES, AT CULPEPER

Some of the Republican leaders in Virginia have been doing a good deal of talking in the pending campaign about putting the negro out of politics. The above is an actual reproduction of the crowd that greeted Captain P. H. McCaull at Culpeper Courthouse on September 18th, when he went there to speak for the Republican State ticket. The picture shows Captain McCaull in his shirt sleeves, with right hand uplifted, telling his audience, composed largely of disfranchised negroes, how they should vote in the coming election. The scene does not at all coincide with the expression that is heard from many of the Republican leaders on the stump regarding the "unhorsing" of the negro as a factor in the politics of the State.

SECRETARY SHAW ON THE TARIFF

Tells Lynchburg Audience He Will Not Try to Meddle in State Matters.

DEMOCRATS NOT DISHONEST

Their Policies Are Bad He Says. McCaull Attacks Record On Schools.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

LYNCHBURG, VA., October 4.—Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, Secretary of the Treasury, addressed an audience of probably one thousand persons, one-third of whom were negroes, at Pao's Tobacco Warehouse. Many of his auditors were persons who are attending the fair, though there were many prominent Democrats present, who gave him a respectful hearing.

As at his other speeches made in Virginia, Mr. Shaw addressed himself principally to the tariff question, saying he would come from Iowa to tell the people of Virginia how to manage their State affairs. He declared politics were not worth the while to make a contest between the two men, but rather between principles and policies. He said the Democrats in Virginia does not hold the position he formerly did among the States of the Union because the people live too much in the past. He thought the difference between the two parties is not in the men in them, but on account of the policies they advocate.

Selling and Buying.

The difference is that the Republicans want a market to sell in, while the Democrats want a cheap market to buy in. The Democratic principle is wrong. Men who believe in it are honest. Cleveland advocated it honestly, but it brought disaster to the country. He claimed there were many protection features in the Wilson-Gorman tariff bill.

"We have tried this time and time again," he said, "and I want to say that the best times we ever had under Democratic rule was during Cleveland's last administration. The Democratic party's policy always brings ruin, not because of dishonest men, but because of bad policies."

The meeting was called to order at 8:30 o'clock by John E. Boze, chairman of the City Republican Committee, who presented Captain P. H. McCaull, who spoke for a half an hour, during which time he assailed the record of the Democratic party in his characteristic manner.

McCaull On Schools.

He claimed that it had become necessary for the farmers to divide the old home place in order to permit his sons to vote, and charged that the longer the Democratic party had worked with the public schools, the fewer because the schools. He said the reason the Democrats do not want free books and free schools, is because intelligence is not a good thing for them.

Secretary Shaw arrived here on a late train this afternoon from Danville, where he spoke last night. He was met by a committee and escorted to the hotel, and a number of citizens called in the evening to pay their respects. To-morrow he will be driven over the city, and he will leave at 2:35 for Charlottesville.

Vigorous Rubbing With Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

will cure Sprains, Strains and all Pains. For Neuralgia and all Rheumatic Pains it has no superior. Don't suffer, but persist in rubbing hard and long with Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment. Large bottles, 25 cents. Trial size, 15 cents.

Owens & Minor Drug Co.

THREE CANDIDATES.

Goochland and Fluvanna Democrats Cannot Agree.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
GOOCHLAND, VA., October 4.—At a mass meeting of the Democrats of Goochland county, at Goochland Courthouse, the following resolutions were adopted: Resolved by the Democracy of Goochland, That we approve and confirm the action of the County Committee in refusing to go into a primary for the nomination of a candidate for the House of Delegates for the district composed of Goochland and Fluvanna, and in the action of the said committee in condemning the candidacy of Hon. Pembroke Pettit, as a flagrant violation of party pledges and the party law of the district.

Resolved, further, That James C. Page, Esq., is the only Democratic candidate for the House of Delegates whom we recognize, or who has any claim upon the Democracy of the district. This action definitely places in the field in the legislative district three candidates, Pembroke Pettit, of Fluvanna, Democrat; Mr. James C. Page, of Goochland, Democrat; and L. O. Haden, Republican.

Fluvanna county held a primary some time ago, in which Mr. Pettit received a majority of the votes. Goochland county declined to enter into this primary, on the ground that the candidacy of a Fluvanna Democrat at this time was in violation of party pledges and directly in the teeth of the alternation principle heretofore prevailing in the district.

Two Republicans.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
ONANCOCK, VA., October 4.—The Republican County Committee has decided Mr. Isaac P. Reynolds, of Chincoteague Island, the nominee for the seat in the Virginia House of Delegates for Accomack county.

Mr. Reynolds is prominent in the oyster interests on the island. The committee endorsed the action of the Elizabeth City Republicans in nominating Captain B. P. Johnson, of Chincoteague, as a Republican, and Elizabeth City.

Judge Lunsford L. Lewis, the Republican candidate for Governor, will speak at Accomack Courthouse Thursday afternoon, October 10th, and at Franklin City, on Friday night, October 20th.

Shaw to Be at Newport News.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
NEWPORT NEWS, VA., October 4.—Local Republicans are making elaborate preparations for receiving Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw when he comes here to speak at the Academy of Music Saturday night. The balcony and boxes at the Academy will be reserved for ladies and their escorts.

WATSON ARRESTED FOR AWFUL CRIME

(Continued from First Page.)

heard of bearing on what took place in the lot, except the evidence of Mr. and Mrs. Brown.

The Tompkins case will be heard to-morrow morning, provided the officers catch Tompkins. What the preliminary hearing of Watson will take place, is not known. He will, it is supposed, be brought to Amherst for the purpose. Mrs. Brown's condition continues to improve. She is still nervous, but aside from this, has recovered from the shock.

COURT IS NOW CONSIDERING APPEAL OF MRS. CHADWICK

(By Associated Press.)
CINCINNATI, O., October 4.—Argument of the government against the contentions in the petition for a new trial for Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick, now under sentence of ten years in the Ohio Penitentiary for conspiracy to wreck an Ohio, Ohio, national bank, was concluded to-day. The matter was taken under advisement by the court. A decision is not expected before November.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Mary E. Lewis.
This esteemed lady departed this life on the 31st of September, 1906, in the 74th year of her age. She was a daughter of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications. She belonged to the old-fashioned class of Virginia ladies. She was a loving helpmate to her husband, who belonged to the same family which gave McRae Lewis, the great pioneer, to the world. The names of her own (that is, the Gault family) are indelibly linked with the history of Virginia and Maryland. The recollection of her unvarying kindness will bring the tear of sympathy to her relatives as well as to her children. A pure and upright Christian from her early womanhood, she was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal Church. She died as she had lived, an humble believer in the faith of Jesus of Nazareth. The funeral services will be held over her grave at the Episcopal Church, at 10 o'clock to-morrow. She was the wife of the late Dr. John Gault, a distinguished physician of Albemarle, and the widow of Z. B. Lewis, of Nelson. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact. She possessed those gentle qualities of charity and love which are highly admired human nature. Her memory will ever be green in the hearts of her children. Connected with her gentle disposition, she had unusual business qualifications.